

Imagine a place where athletes train for more than winning the next game or championship, where it's about more than capturing the next gold medal or signing the next big contract.

PROJECT ELITE

Auburn, Indiana

Imagine this community where faith and sports intertwine to cultivate excellence in people of all ages and helps them win at the game of life.

Reflect upon a time when you knew you belonged, a place where you were accepted and appreciated, where you felt wanted and safe. Maybe it was a club, a youth organization, a community group, at church or school, or perhaps it was your family. Remember the great feeling of being secure in your identity and wanted for who you were.

Now, think of a time when you were on a team that “knocked it out of the park.” Where it was one for all and all for one, and you experienced that magical moment when all the elements came together to make a winning combination. Was it a study cohort, an athletic team, a project group, or maybe a mission trip or service project where you experienced the exhilaration of a job well done, a mission accomplished?

Without community, people can falter, struggle, and languish. Ambassador Enterprises’ mission is to invest in better community for time and eternity. Project Elite and the acquisition of the CR11A Interchange property off Interstate 69 (I-69) reflect our dedication to creating lasting impact that helps the people of Auburn, Indiana, its neighboring communities, and the entire Northeast Indiana region thrive.

Our vision is to develop a world-class sports campus that integrates athletic excellence with personal growth through a Christ-centered, character-based, and servant-minded approach. We aspire to build a community where individuals can realize their full physical and spiritual potential, guided by faith and inspired to excel on and off the field. This initiative aims to bring people together and positively impact lives through sports and spiritual development.

Project Elite has the potential to invigorate the local economy by catalyzing economic development, including restaurants, hotels, and retail spaces, and help transform the region into a family-friendly destination. This, in turn, would create new jobs, increase tax revenue, and provide new green spaces, affordable housing options, and cultural attractions.

Local ownership has always been a core belief, and Daryle and Brenda Doden are grateful residents of DeKalb County. Ultimately, our goal is to contribute to establishing a more vibrant community and robust region.

Northeast Indiana/City of Fort Wayne

Northeast Indiana's central location is within a three-hour drive of major Midwest cities like Chicago, Cincinnati, and Indianapolis, and offers a host of advantages as an area for development and as a regional destination. At its hub and the second-largest city in Indiana, Fort Wayne (265,974 people; 423,000 in the metropolitan statistical area) was recently ranked the number one emerging real estate market in America according to MarketWatch! Area amenities and conveniences include:

- More than 5,500 hotel rooms in the metropolitan area with 15% more affordable expenses across the board than you'll find in other major cities in the Midwest.
- International Airport served by daily flights to and from Atlanta, Charlotte, Chicago-O'Hare, Dallas/Fort Worth, Detroit, and Minneapolis/St. Paul.

- Fort Wayne was rated the 17th best city in America for “Work-Life balance” because of its rich concentration of cultural amenities, recreation opportunities and overall affordability when compared to the average number of weeks worked per year.
- Access to the Parkview Field (home of the TinCaps, a baseball High-A affiliate of the San Diego Padres) and the Allen County War Memorial Coliseum (home to the Komets, a hockey affiliate of the Edmonton Oilers).
- Northeast Indiana region is home to several economic development opportunities, higher educational institutions, and a robust talent pipeline.
- The State of Indiana was recently ranked number one in the nation for leading the way in infrastructure investment and quality.
- With its favorable cost of living index, Indiana is a prime location for starting a business and ranked second in the country by Forbes for its business-friendly environment and substantial labor pool, Indiana offers a cost-effective investment opportunity.

DeKalb County/City of Auburn

Although the exit off I-69 currently lacks amenities, a wealth of attractions, including restaurants, retail, and others, can be found just minutes north in the City of Auburn:

- National and local restaurants and hotels
- Family Attractions including museums, cultural centers, and theaters.
- Recreational activities including golf, hiking trails, and nature preserves.
- Retailers including groceries, big box, and general merchandise.

FAQS

What is the history of the CR11A Interchange property?

The Auburn Auction Park, located just south of Auburn, Indiana, has a long history dating back to 1971 when collector car auctions first took place in the area. Initially hosted at DeKalb High School, the auctions moved to the County Road 11A property in 1989 under the management of Kruse Auctions. This site became a prominent venue for car enthusiasts, drawing large crowds and showcasing up to 5,000 collectible vehicles during major events.

In 2011, the property was sold to RM Auctions, which rebranded it under the subsidiary Auctions America, preserving its legacy as a significant location for automotive auctions. The park continued to be a major destination for car culture, where enthusiasts could come together to celebrate their shared passion.

In 2022, J.T. Fisher Properties purchased the property with plans to transform it into a youth sports park. The proposed development included multiple indoor and outdoor sports facilities, potentially turning the site into a year-round destination for sports events. However, the project faced numerous challenges and ultimately failed to materialize. In December 2023, it was sold to XCel Properties, who rented the property to General Motors for use as inventory storage and parking.

In May 2024, Ambassador Enterprises acquired the CR11A interchange property.

Who purchased CR11A Interchange?

The property was purchased by Ambassador Enterprises, a locally owned legacy-minded private equity firm investing for the glory of God and three returns: financial sustainability, cultural influence, and Kingdom impact.

Why did you purchase CR11A Interchange?

We have always believed in the importance of local ownership. Brenda and Daryle Doden are grateful residents of DeKalb County. We acquired the property because we believe we have a vision for it that will contribute long-term value to Auburn, the surrounding communities, and the region.

More specifically, we envision creating a world-class sports campus where excellence in athletics intersects with profound personal transformation through a Christ-centered approach. We want to cultivate a sports community where individuals reach their full physical and spiritual potential, guided by Christ's love and motivated to excel on and off the field. We want a welcoming environment where athletes, coaches, referees, parents, and mentors can share experiences and strengthen their faith.

How will this project impact the local community?

We want to be a source of hope and inspiration, bringing people together and changing lives through the pursuit of athletic excellence and spiritual growth. By successfully integrating elite athletic training with education centered around Christ and the development of strong character, we hope to be a model for youth development that prioritizes character development to produce outstanding athletes who are also exceptional human beings.

The CR11A Interchange redevelopment is expected to be a significant economic driver by catalyzing economic development, including retail spaces, restaurants, and hotels, to create a destination and boost the local economy. This would create new jobs, generate tax revenue, and provide new green spaces, affordable housing options, and cultural attractions. Ultimately, our goal is to contribute to establishing a more robust and vibrant community.

Who will be involved in the development and use of this property?

Collaboration is vital to our success, and we will engage with philosophically like-minded, relationally compatible, and mutually aligned partners interested in one or more areas of the project: ownership, development, management, utilization of space, and financing. Ideas for consideration will be vetted through our RFI process.

When will this happen?

We are currently in the early stages of envisioning this project. We are exploring the types of organizations and potential partners that align with our vision and will help bring this innovative campus to life for the benefit of the local community. Once our plans are finalized, we will make an announcement.
